Dear Reader:
Welcome to the seventh volume of Borders.

Borders is an independent journal that is run by undergraduate students who are dedicated to facilitating discussion of physical, cultural, temporal and theoretical boundaries and divisions. This issue features the work of several undergraduate students in the College of the Arts at the University of Guelph. We are proud to present six different papers that explore borders in different ways. We would love for Borders to continue to provide a means for our readers to reflect on more diverse and possible topics. We encourage you to tell your friends about Borders, to pick up an issue, and to submit a paper. With your help we can enhance the undergraduate experience by moving outside the realm of grades and deadlines, and simply exist as a domain for discussion and learning both in Guelph and beyond.

Managing Editors
Ashley Street    Alla Miroshnichenko

Editors
Peter Schreier    Jamie Duplain

Special thanks to
CSA

Faculty Advisor
Dr. Susan Bold, School of English and Theatre Studies

Art, Photography and Design
Alla Miroshnichenko
Contents:

“The Male Gaze: Addressing the Angel/Monster Dichotomy in Jean Rhys’ Wide Sargasso Sea”
Emily Carlisle ................................................................. 4

“Risk: A Response to Dear Enbridge”
Peter Schreier ............................................................... 10

“The Media of Societal Discourse”
Isaac Bordignon ........................................................... 12

“Simulating Authenticity: A semiotic analysis of Apple’s ‘Think Big’ Marketing Campaign”
Katie Zimmer ................................................................. 18

“Texts Without Borders”
Will Wellington .............................................................. 26

“Condemning the Patriarchally Perpetuated Woman-Made Glass Ceiling”
Natane Allison ............................................................... 32

“Writing as Resolve in Persuasion”
Ariel Bisset ................................................................. 36