A Message from the Profiles Editor

Libraries are great because of the people who work there. I think that is why the Profiles section has always been my favorite part of Partnership: because it gives all of us a chance to share our stories and connect with library colleagues from across the country.

Just as the heart and soul of a library is the people, rather than the building or the books on the shelf, the people behind the scenes at Partnership make the journal what it is. So you can get to know us a little bit better, the next two issues of the journal feature profiles of some of the members of the editorial board who work hard to bring you Partnership. We hope that you enjoy reading our stories as much as we’ve enjoyed reading yours!
